

TATTVA

A performance by Amber Bosteels en Arnaud Soetens

Tattva is the bridge between East and West. An exploration of transformation. A story of metamorphosis. Amber Bosteels and Arnaud Soetens translate Shiva in the form of Nataraja, dancing the universe into motion. The destroyer of the old, making way for the new to emerge. The line between masculine and feminine, the contrast between grounded and cosmic, the yogi, deep in the mountains. With a nod to 2026, they weave classical Indian and contemporary dance and music into a pulsating symbiosis that embraces the structure of chaos and intention. The piece hypnotises the viewer, inviting them to feel and reconnect with the deep roots of our existence, to recognise the cycles and nuance the forms of our identities. Tattva discovers the energy of Shiva: everything and nothing, the beginning and the end. Shiva is us.

Artistic Vision

A vision can easily tend towards the grand, yet all the more essential is the courage to voice our dreams. Our art is a gateway to our own well-being, but also to that of our society. A mirror of our inner world. By awakening all our senses through dance, music, words and stage, we hope to set off small chain reactions in consciousness. In the softness and beauty of creation, we weave the cocoon in which we all long to be. A connection that begins from within. From an essence, Tattva, rooted in Eastern mysticism and philosophy, gently whispering towards the West. Tattva is a reflection of who we are. A way of seeing and thinking that we wish to share without imposing it. Change is found in slowness.

Tattva is a seed that has been planted, one we have been nurturing and cultivating over the past two years. A project that, at its core, can take many forms and remains open to collaboration and further exploration.

ABOUT US

AMBER BOSTEELS

Amber Bosteels is a dancer, teacher and choreographer. At the age of eight, she discovered her passion for Indian dance, which continues to inspire her to this day. At eighteen, she moved to Leeds, where she trained for three years at the Northern School of Contemporary Dance.

After graduating, she began working as a freelance dancer and maker, developing a practice rooted between Belgium and India. She creates and performs work that weaves contemporary and Indian dance forms together. She has performed with various companies and created her own work, including Jumping over the Zebra Stripes, Hans and Tattva.

Alongside her work as a performer, Amber shares her love of movement through both dance and yoga, with a focus on improvisation, playful movement, body awareness and imagination. In Ghent, she co-coordinates the movement platform DEVLOER and works as a camera operator for dance and theatre performances with Beeldstorm.

ARNAUD SOETENS

Arnaud, born in Ghent and raised in Ronse, grew up playing the violin and singing classical music. He later expanded his practice into pop and jazz vocals and guitar. Over the years, his musical interests broadened towards electronic, ambient and experimental music, inspired both by his father’s record collection and by his own musical discoveries.

He studied pop and jazz vocals in Antwerp, followed by Vocal and Music Production at PXL-Music. There, he deepened his knowledge of vocal techniques, songwriting and audio engineering, while developing his skills on instruments such as piano, synthesizers, drums and percussion.

He has worked in various studios on a wide range of projects, from recording bands and podcasts to composing and producing his own music under the name Duan Ra. His style brings together jazz, electronic and contemporary music, often drawing inspiration from nature, science and philosophy.

Arnaud is passionate about working across disciplines. He collaborates with dancers, visual artists and poets to create immersive, narrative-driven projects.

TARGET AUDIENCE/ PERFORMANCE CONTEXT

Tattva is aimed at a broad and diverse audience, exploring universal themes such as transformation, slowing down, rebuilding and identity. The performance invites both experienced performing arts audiences and those less familiar with performance to watch, listen and experience in an intuitive way. Through its open and sensory nature, Tattva is accessible to people of all ages and backgrounds.

The performance can take place both in theatres and cultural centres, as well as in unconventional locations such as historic buildings, industrial spaces or outdoor environments. What is essential is an intimate setting in which the audience and performers share the same space, without an overload of sensory stimuli.

The performance can also be combined with a workshop. During the workshop, participants are introduced to the themes explored in the performance. As a yoga teacher, Amber shares her knowledge and guides participants towards a deeper connection with their bodies. The experience is enriched by a soundscape created by Arnaud, who uses sound and music to support and deepen the experience.
